Conservation tips for summer

Mississippi Power Company customers in Bay St. Louis can begin now to help reduce their energy consumption as hot summer weather approaches. Local Manager Perry Gibson says that adequate home insulation will help lower air conditioning costs in the summer and heating costs

Recommended minimums in "R-values" (insulation's resistance to the flow of heat) are: R-30 blown, batt or blanket overhead; R-18 blown, batt or blanket in walls; and R-19 batt or blanket beneath floors. "Also, don't forget to properly fit and weatherstrip windows and doors and to always keep them tightly closed," he said. The most significant thing a consumer can do immediately to realize the most efficient use of air conditioning is to set the thermostat at the highest comfortable temperature, usually about 78 degrees. "Consumers just don't realize the difference a few degrees make. In our warmer, humid climate, every degree you set the thermostat below 78 degrees increases your energy consumption almost 10 percent," Gibson pointed out. Another energy-saving practice is to clean or change air conditioning filters at least once a month. Dirty filters make the unit work harder and cause higher operating costs. If the unit has been off during a cool night, give it an early start the next morning before the day's summer heat fills the house. Make sure that the air

Trust fund established

Tornado wrecked church seeks rebuilding dollars

A trust fund, directed towards the rebuilding of the Robinson Chapel Church of God in Christ has been established in the Hancock Bank, Bay St. Louis.

The church, located just across the Louisville and Nashville Railroad tracks on Washington Street, was destroyed Monday by a tornado. Described by Bob Boudin, Hancock County Civil Defense director, as "a freak," the tornado struck without warning in the early hours leaving an estimated $20,000 worth of damage in its wake. There were no reports of injuries in spite of several houses having sustained various forms of damage and large trees broken and flung around. The appeal for rebuilding fund assistance was issued by both the church's pastor and membership. "Donations," they said, "can be addressed and mailed to: Trust Fund, Robinson Chapel Church of God in Christ, c/o Hancock Bank, Bay St. Louis, Ms. 39520."

Most of the damage from the storm was confined to the Washington St. area although power lines were affected in several areas of the city and trees were felled in the Cedar Point, Main Street, and Washington areas.

The civil defense director said that at the time of the tornado the county was not under any weather service alert other than heavy thunderstorms and rain.

Division 22 is now on active duty

Coastal River Division 22, a U.S. Navy Riverine Warfare Unit, based in New Orleans, is conducting its annual active duty training along East Pearl River.

The unit's spokesman said Friday they would be engaged in simulated combat training on the East Pearl through May 14. During this period they will additionally be concentrating on riverine maneuvers which will on occasion involve the necessity of high speed travel and the discharge of blank ammunition and pyrotechnics.

Particularly heavy warfare practice will be conducted in Waterhouse Bayou and East Pearl in that area between Interstate 10 and NASA NSTL.

Clarification

of questioning

The Echo has been asked to clarify its report on the questioning of a child by Waveland City Police in relation to a recent break-in at that city's elementary school.

The officers, both of whom were to be censured by city council for conducting the questioning while both the child's parents were absent from the home, were seeking to gain information of the incident. Neither they, nor the report, intended to infer any possible role in the incident by the juvenile questioned.

Symbol of Energy Efficiency

A home that displays this symbol is special because it has met rigid E3 construction requirements. E3 homeowners can expect a savings of up to 60% on their heating and cooling costs. Their homes are cleaner, more comfortable and have a higher resale value, too.

For a new home to qualify it must be inspected and approved by personnel from Mississippi Power Company. If it meets E3 standards, the home may be identified by the distinctive bronze door knocker, symbol of its energy efficiency. Insist that your new home is an E3 Home!

In the face of rising energy costs, building a new home to E3 energy-saving standards is the only practical way to build.

For information on how your new home can qualify as an E3 home, pick up a free folder at any Mississippi Power Office.

Pass stages honors night

Students from all grades of the Pass Christian Senior High Schools, whose names had appeared either on the principal's or superintendent's honor rolls, were recognized at a scholastic banquet Wednesday.

Special honors of the evening went to Austin Dill who after being named to the superintendent's honor roll for an all A semester, Dill was given a special award for having maintained an all A average for the entire year. A letter from the superintendent commending Dill on his achievement was read into the record by George Watson, assistant superintendent.

He said the interesting thing was that they were not all seniors, juniors, sophomores, or freshmen, but represented a cross section of the high school with an approximate equal number coming from each class.

"Among you are students who scored 27 and 28 on the ACT test," Lizana said, adding, "you are scholars!" Lizana told the group they represented the future engineers, scientists, and professional group members of the country's future.

Hancock cafeteria staffs attend third '77 workshop

By MILDRED P. SWITZER, R.D.
Cafeteria Supervisor
Hancock County School District

School cafeteria kitchens are of necessity economically equipped with as little equipment as possible in most cases. For this reason, cafeteria workers must learn to be innovative in the use of the equipment they have available. Turning to the professionals, equipment demonstration stressing versatility was the order of the day at the third and final meeting in a series of school food service workshops for cafeteria workers from the Bay St. Louis School District, the Hancock County School District, and the Pass Christian Municipal School District, held Monday afternoon, May 2, 1977, at Hancock North Central Cafeteria.

C. Rollins Brown, of C. Rollins Brown and Associates, demonstrated various uses of several pieces of commercial cooking equipment found in school kitchens. Concentrating on the convection oven, the steam cooker, and the steam kettle, Mr. Brown challenged each worker to strive to use each piece of equipment to its fullest.

Special guest, Bud Herrman, Sales Manager for Robot Coupe, held the interest of workshop participants and tickled their imagination with a fascinating and informative demonstration of the many and varied uses of his product, a commercial vertical cutter, which is found in many school kitchens. The dreaded job of slicing onions was reduced to a matter of the twist of the wrist with no more tears; not to mention the ease and speed with which cabbage for cole slaw and lettuce for tossed salad was chopped. The pros at operating a vertical cutter learned new tricks and the have-nots left enviously wishing they had one.

Following the awarding of the door prize to Helen Necaise, Cafeteria Worker from Hancock County School District, each workshop participant was thanked for their support of this project and encouraged to the ideas and information presented at these meetings and make them part of their daily working habits.

Washington Report

by Trent Lott

LOTT ON ILLEGAL ALIEN TASK FORCE

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Congressman Trent Lott (R-Miss) is participating in a special Congressional Task Force on the Illegal Alien problem in this country. The Task Force was formed by the Republican Study Group early last week to consider the problem and legislative proposals on this topic. Among the proposals being reviewed is legislation introduced by Mr. Lott to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act in February of this year.

Congressman Lott's proposal would strengthen the penalties for knowingly employing an illegal alien, and would reduce the number of lawfully admitted aliens in the United States during periods of high unemployment. In introducing his amendment to the Act, Mr. Lott stated, "Most of these persons come here seeking employment opportunities to the detriment of the American worker. Upon their arrival, these unlawfully admitted aliens create several problems in our economy: they compete for jobs with low-salaried laborers, depress the wages of U.S. workers, and take jobs from Americans, causing them to look to various Government agencies for assistance."

Mr. Lott's bill would reduce the number of lawfully admitted aliens in the nation whenever the quarterly unemployment rate average exceeds 5 percent. For every percentage point above 5 percent, the number of immigrant visas issued the next quarter would be reduced by 10 percent.

This decrease in immigrants would increase the job prospects for Americans. Mr. Lott noted, "I believe it is time that Congress act swiftly, not so much in the direction of temporary public employment, but more toward preventing the economy. It is obvious that we have more workers than we have jobs in this country. The legislation which I have introduced will go a long way toward putting Americans back to work."

News from Senator Stennis

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Senator John C. Stennis today introduced a bill proposing a number of important and significant amendments to the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, commonly known as OSHA.

In introducing the bill, the Senator said that he felt "that every member of the Congress is aware of the continued and increasing groundswell of opposition to and criticism of the OSHA program. We have all received expressions of frustration and outrage from constituents who are overwhelmed with rules, standards, and burdens which are unreasonable and which often have no logical relation to safety and health."

Stennis stated that his bill has a two-fold purpose. First, he said, it would exempt employers with twenty-five employees or less from the Act. Second, he continued, "it would make the Act more flexible as to all employers and relieve them from many of the onerous, burdensome, and inflexible provisions of the Act and the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder."

Stennis asserted that small employers are both overburdened and frustrated. They do not, he said, "have the resources, either financial or otherwise, to interpret and implement what has become literally a flood of technical, complex, and voluminous rules and standards. That is the reason," he continued, "why I believe that those employing twenty-five employees or less should be exempt from the Act."

He stressed, however, that his bill would also provide "greatly needed relief" to the large employer. He cited a provision of the bill providing that "no standards could be promulgated requiring the alteration, replacement, or phaseout of existing equipment, machinery, or facilities before the expiration of its normal useful life unless the failure to do so would result in a serious violation" of the Act.

The Senator also pointed out that his proposed amendments would protect employers from arbitrary and overly rigorous application of the Act and unwarranted citations or penalties for violations. "For example," he said, "an employer could not receive a citation or penalty under my proposed amendments for violation of a rule or if he was able to show that implementing such rule or standard would not materially affect the safety or health of his employees, or that he had employed alternative procedures to protect his employees from the hazards contemplated by the rule or standard which were so effective in protecting the safety and health of his employees."

The Senator's bill also proposes an amendment providing that in determining whether certain penalties should be assessed due consideration shall be given to the gravity of the violation, the good faith of the employer, and the employer's history of previous violations.

Stennis asserted that "it is obvious that there has been both misdirection and overzealousness in the enforcement of the provisions of OSHA and the rules and regulations issued under it." He said that "it is the obligation of the Congress to act to remedy the situation" particularly since "the Congress itself must bear some part of the blame because it vested OSHA with such broad and sweeping authority to make such far-reaching rules and regulations."

Stating that he believed his proposed amendments would restrain and curb the excesses, Stennis said he hoped "it will be enacted into law and also that comprehensive hearings will be held which will inquire into OSHA and its operations closely and carefully."

The Peoples Business

TOWARD A BETTER STATE

The Mississippi Economic Council begins work on its activities for the coming year when six committees meet in Jackson on May 25. MEC, frequently called the State Chamber of Commerce and the "Voice of Business," will be beginning its 29th year.

Though the Council has sought changes to improve the state's business climate during the past quarter century, its efforts have not ended there. The organization has long sought - and won - changes in government, taxation, highways, and education which have meant better services for all citizens.

As MEC continues its quest for a better life style for Mississippians, it has mapped a Program of work for the next 12 months which includes seeking equalization of property assessments so that every citizen will carry his fair share of the tax burden and no more or less.

flows freely to and from your unit both inside and outside the house.

When buying a new cooling unit, select one with a high energy efficiency ratio (EER). The higher the EER, the more efficiently and less expensively the unit will operate. An EER of 7.5 or higher is considered good.

Gibson said that one complaint he often hears from customers in the summertime is that a person goes on vacation and isn't at home to use a lot of electricity. Yet the amount of his service bill goes up. "Why?" the customer asks.

"When your family is away from home for several days or weeks, you probably will use less electricity than when you're at home," Gibson explained. "But the amount of your electric bill won't necessarily be less than the previous month. One reason is because the refrigerator and freezer still operate; they may run longer than normal with the air conditioning off and the temperature inside the house higher than usual."

Gibson also pointed out that people about to leave for vacation often use more electricity for last minute cleaning, washing and drying. When they return home, there's another flurry of washing and drying.

"Also, in many instances, the time a family is away from home falls within two billing periods rather than one. Any decrease in usage would split between two electric bills and wouldn't be as noticeable as if the full effect were shown on one bill," he concluded.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor

Sea Coast Echo,
Do the people of Bay St. Louis know that Hancock County officials are removing the sand beach to be used, we are told, for County road repair? Hundreds, possibly thousands of tons of sand will eventually be taken to the Daniels Street storage yard, never to be replaced.

This must be one of the most ridiculous pieces of bureaucratic nonsense in the history of this town or any other town. One cannot help but be amazed at the thinking of our County officials.

The situation arises from the fact that the sand is blown across South Beach Boulevard onto the north edge of the road where it collects. It is then pushed into large piles, by the County employees, loaded onto dump trucks and hauled to a storage yard on Daniels Avenue in Waveland, a round trip of about five miles.

Our white sand beach is an outstanding attraction to Bay St. Louis, enhancing the beauty of our town and giving pleasure to thousands. Without it, we are only another southern Mississippi village.

We understand that the Federal Government financed the building of the sea wall and the beach to protect the land from natural erosion, at the same time it gave the City of Bay St. Louis its greatest asset, a resort beach.

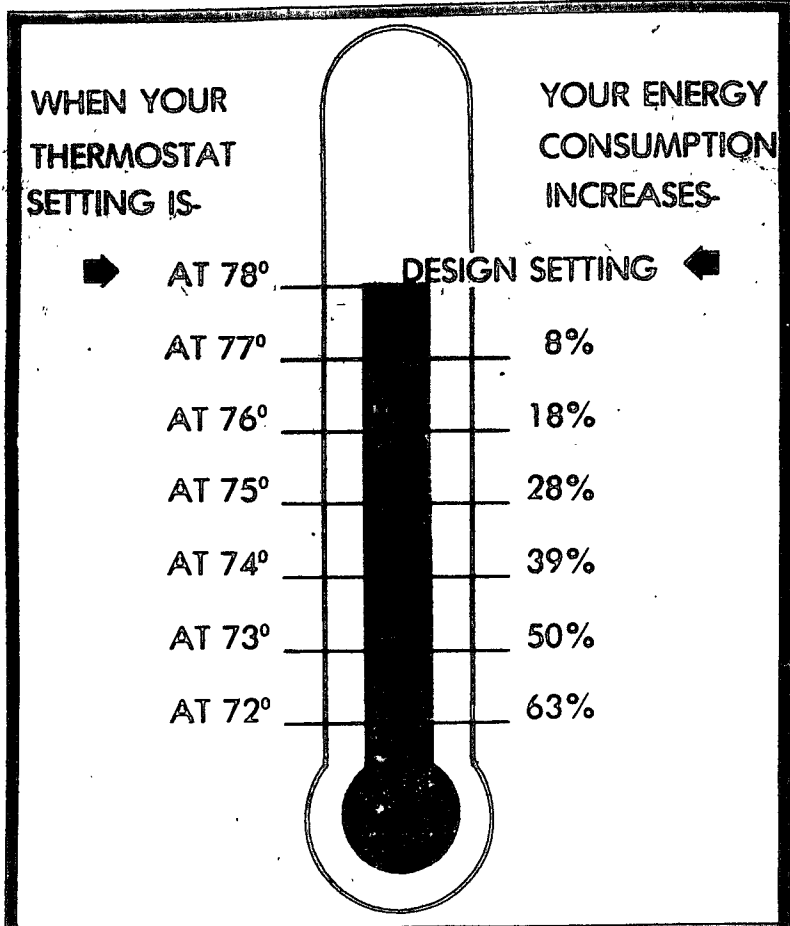

For the County to now haul it away, instead of replacing the sand on the beach, violates their original purpose. The sand could easily be replaced by the backhoe putting it on the other side of the road. This will eliminate many miles of hauling, the use of trucks and the expenditure of gasoline.

The savings in energy certainly arrants it.

Stopping the erosion of our beach calls for it.

The people of Bay St. Louis should demand it.

Consumer Report

EVERYTHING YOU WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT SMOKE DETECTORS

Recently public service ads and commercials have urged you to protect your life and your family with smoke detectors. Besides these obvious incentives, smoke detectors can also save you money. Many insurance companies are now offering discounts to homeowners who install smoke detectors. So check with your insurance company.

Smoke detectors work by sensing smoke from a distant fire and sounding an alarm so you will have time to escape. They are particularly valuable at night when you are sleeping.

The two types of detectors on the market use different sensors to detect the smoke:

1. Photoelectric types use a light bulb and a photoelectric cell. The smoke cuts the amount of light reaching the cell and the alarm sounds. This type is particularly good at sensing smoldering fires.

2. Ionization chamber types use a small radiation source that produces electrically charged air molecules called ions which allow an electric flow in the chamber. Smoke particles attach themselves to the ions cutting the electric flow. The alarm sounds. This type is particularly good at warning of flaming fires.

Because smoke rises, the detectors are placed either on the ceiling or high up on the wall. You should have one in the bedroom area (if that area is spread out, add others so the warning will be heard). For added safety, get the detectors interconnected so that if one alarm goes off, all will sound.

Detectors use either batteries or house current. Batteries have to be changed about once a year. Most battery units have a warning when the batteries are getting weak. The household current units can either be plug-in types or wired-in. If you have an outlet close at hand, there is no problem. But wiring will take an electrician.

Once your smoke detector is up, check it every month and keep it clean. And practice what to do when the signal sounds. Every person in your family should know at least two ways to get out of the house. And there should be a special place to meet outside so everyone will be accounted for. When the detector goes off, you have a very short time to get out. So use it wisely.

Smoke detectors are sold at different prices. Shop around and compare those prices, and beware of those sold door-to-door at "special introductory offer" prices which can exceed $600 for your entire home.

We all buy furniture at some time or another. And all of us no doubt have the same problem - how do you know what's good, what's worth the price, and what isn't.

One way of avoiding problems with furniture is to buy from a reliable store that enjoys a reputation for honesty and integrity. But even when you do this, you should also follow these basic guidelines.

- Know what you want. Decide in advance what pieces of furniture you are looking for and what styles you are interested in. Shop around to get some idea of prices.

- Know how much you can spend. This will prevent you from getting in over your head once you go to make a purchase. Shop around to get some idea of prices.

- Check the quality of the workmanship by:

- leaning on the table you are considering or swaying back and forth in the chair you are interested in. If the piece is wobbly, its joints are probably poor quality.

- shaking the piece to see if the sides, drawers, or panels are loose.

- taking out drawers to see that they slide in and out easily.

- checking the finish to see that it is bluish free and unsteaked.

- squeezing the arms of sofas and chairs. If there is adequate padding between the fabric and wood, you should not be able to feel the frame.

- testing the cushions for firmness and bounciness. Cushions that are too soft, mushy, or limp won't wear well.

- reading the CONTENT LABEL. This tag is required by law on all upholstered furniture. A WHITE tag indicates a new piece. This label also tells you the type of filling used.

Federal Regulations protect you: Each piece of furniture must be tagged by the manufacturer, and the tag has to state exactly what the furniture is made of.

- Furniture made in the U.S. cannot be called Danish, Spanish, Italian, or other national names unless the term is qualified with another word-example: Spanish-style, Danish design.

- Fabrics must be labeled according to both the material used and the percentage material-cotton 60 percent; nylon 40 percent, for example.

It is important to shop carefully and to look for quality construction in furniture-quality that will pay off in the long run in years of good service.
